Course Description and Objectives

The BUS 520 Strategy and Leadership course is an integrated overview of strategy, strategic planning, and strategic management for business leaders. Special emphasis is on the role of leadership in the strategic business management process.

The reality of business life is that no person is an island—smart quantitative analysis without the support of employees, colleagues, or supervisors goes nowhere. To succeed in your career and to improve the performance of your company requires working with others effectively

In organizations large and small, leaders need to influence others toward a common goal, to build motivation to pursue that goal, and to guide others in how they pursue that goal. In this course, we will study advanced concepts and findings in leadership, using both in-depth examples from cases and exercises, as well as relying on the most well-established and up-to-date research from economics, psychology, and organizational behavior. Most readings will be summaries of research as printed in popular press outlets like the New York Times and Harvard Business Review; occasionally, I will also ask you to read the original source articles as printed in academic journals, or chapters in books.

The course analyzes the major elements of strategic management and the Leadership interactions required among major participants in a Team environment. The course is designed to replicate the typical Leadership situations and objectives required in a modern VUCA (Volatility, Uncertainty, Complexity, and Ambiguous) based organization.

Program Learning Outcomes:

- 1) Demonstrate high proficiency in critical thinking, oral and written communication, personal ethical conduct, and collaboration skills.
- 2) Demonstrate, orally and in writing, analytical and integrative skills in making strategic business decisions.
- 3) Demonstrate an understanding of the global strategic operating environment of modern business organizations.
- 4) Produce written innovative and integrative strategic business plans, including leadership plans that adapt to uncertain and unpredictable environments.
- 5) Demonstrate an understanding of relevant Leadership disciplines.
- 6) Demonstrate leadership skills in a variety of situations and settings

By the successful completion of this course, your course learning outcomes will be:

- 1) A clear understanding of strategic leadership.
- 2) A demonstration of strategic development for a leadership expansion opportunity.
- 3) Development and refinement of critical thinking skills.

4) Demonstration of working in a Leaderful leadership position in a VUCA (Volatile, Complex, Uncertain, and Ambiguous) business environment.

Some of the most important topics or projects covered in this course:

Designing Effective Systems

- Incentives and Motivation: We discuss how to facilitate superior performance through the use of pay-for-performance, bonuses, goals, and non-contingent pay systems. Topics include the limitations of pay as a motivator and the fit between compensation and culture.
- Organizational Design and Culture: We focus on diagnosing internal and external issues that confront organizations, and identifying principles for selecting the organizational structure most appropriate for that situation. We then consider how shared values and norms in organizations shape how individuals make sense of each other, work, achievements, and other factors.

Developing Skills

- Leadership: We discuss the importance of establishing strong relationships in effectively leading others to a shared vision that they have helped create.
- Decision Making and Negotiation: We consider the effectiveness of individuals and groups in making organizational decisions. We identify group processes that foster diversity of knowledge, avoid disruptive conflict, and harness constructive social influence to achieve superior group outcomes across a range of group tasks.

Facing Current Challenges

- Creativity and Networks: We focus on the fact that all organizations need to balance “exploring” for new ideas while “executing” on existing abilities. We consider how cognitive, group, network, and organizational processes help promote exploration when needed.

- Ethics: We examine the psychological and organizational factors that lead people to act against their conscience and consider the role that individual leadership plays in demonstrating courage and fostering courage in others.

Assignment Descriptions detailed descriptions of the

1/ In-Class Participation & Attendance

Because every class session will be based on a collective analysis of a case, exercise, or readings, it is critical that you attend class and come prepared to participate actively in the discussion. The questions I provide in the syllabus and in the web surveys will help you prepare for class.

Learning for everyone in this class is enhanced through debate, different perspectives, and new insights that come from you. Keep in mind that your goals should be to contribute high quality comments, not high quantity. You detract from class discussion if you talk a lot and do not make a clear point. To contribute high quality comments, you must also listen carefully to the comments of your classmates. You should try to extend or qualify their comments while avoiding repeating them.

Some examples of useful comments are ones that:

- Effectively apply class concepts to examples from a case
- Identify the critical factors that underlie an organizational issue or dilemma
- Offer important additional issues or conditions that qualify an analysis
- Present insightful examples from outside of class

To keep class conversations interesting and widely distributed across students, I will give priority to those who have spoken less. I will sometimes solicit participation from specific students, based on their responses to web surveys and their work experience.

At the end of the course, you will be asked to complete an online survey in which you rate your section mates in terms of the quality of their contributions. These ratings will be combined with our own assessments to determine an overall participation score.

2/ Case Reports: Throughout the course, students are required to submit short case reports that assess their preparation and understanding of the assigned case materials. These reports should succinctly summarize key insights, demonstrate critical thinking, and provide thoughtful analysis relevant to the case discussion. The reports will be graded on a credit/no-credit basis, meaning that full credit is awarded if the report reflects sufficient preparation and a strong grasp of the material. These assignments are designed to encourage active engagement with the course content and to prepare students for in-depth class discussions.

3/ Surveys and you will complete a web survey or exercise prior to class. The surveys will typically ask you about your reaction to cases and readings for the upcoming session. Links to these surveys will be available on the course site. I will frequently use your responses in class at an aggregate level and, occasionally, call on an individual to discuss her or his response. You should complete the relevant readings before answering the web survey. Unless instructed otherwise, surveys are due by 10 p.m. the night before the class meets.

Exercises: For several sessions

4/ Leader Interview Project. In this individual project, students will interview someone playing a leadership role in an organization. You will plan and execute an interview, aiming to learn about the leader's behaviors, and evaluating the leader's style and approaches in the domains we've discussed in class. This interview should occur late in the term – ideally, mid-November– so please plan ahead to select an appropriate leader and book that time. Note that the leader can be promised confidentiality; you can remove any identifying details from your submitted and presented materials. As a deliverable, you will provide a list of the questions asked, the leader's responses (summarized by you), and your own analysis, written as you see fit. This project will be the major predictor of grades, and as such, needs to demonstrate your grasp of the course materials. The project will be graded on: (a) Quality of interview questions asked, (b) strength and complexity of analysis of responses, (c) rigorous application of course content to the analysis. Details will be given out in class and posted on Canvas.

5/ Team Case Analysis: “How Pixar Fosters Collective Creativity”: Your team will write an analysis of a current business event chosen by the professor. Details on the assignment will be provided during the course.

6/ Team Simulations: As part of the course, teams will participate in strategy simulations designed to mimic real-world business scenarios. These simulations will challenge teams to apply course concepts in a dynamic and interactive environment, requiring them to make strategic decisions, analyze outcomes, and adapt their approach based on evolving circumstances. The simulations will be ongoing throughout the course, providing opportunities for teams to collaborate, test their problem-solving skills, and refine their strategies. Performance in these simulations will be assessed based on the team's ability to navigate the challenges effectively and demonstrate a deep understanding of the course material.

7/ Team Practice Essay: For this assignment, teams will collaboratively draft a practice essay that reflects the types of questions expected on the final exam. Each team member is required to independently write their own essay before meeting as a team. Afterward, the team will convene to synthesize their individual insights into a single, cohesive answer.

8/ Exams You will take the mid-term quiz and the final exam individually. This exam will be only multiple choice questions. The final exam will count for 25% and will be during finals week, during our class session. It will consist of multiple choice and essay/short answer questions. You will complete a team practice essay (see above) that will help prepare you for the short-answer portion of the individual final exam. The final exam time can't be changed except for serious medical or personal emergencies. Please notify me as soon as possible if such an emergency arises.
